

Ole Overmoen, a man working for Hammer & Condy, was severely kicked on the head by a broncho last Saturday afternoon and received a gash that required the services of a doctor and Dr. Westley was called in to attend to him. According to Ole's story the broncho is a peculiar beast, and before anyone can go up to him you have to give the bronk a little con talk. On this occasion Ole forgot to make his speech to the bronk who resented the neglect by kicking him a couple of times and it is only a streak of good luck that allowed Ole to escape with his life. The business end of a broncho who's feelings have been hurt is a bad thing to tackle.