

The little daughter of Western Houghton died last Wednesday from spinal meningitis. She was taken sick some few days before that with diphtheria but recovered from that only to succumb to the other disease. The little child was two years and three months old and had been tenderly cared for since the death of its mother by Mr. and Mrs. Wilmot Houghton, who had learned to love the little girl as their own. To them and the stricken father sympathy is expressed by their many friends.