

Called Home.

At the home of her sister, Mrs. A. Haskell, last Monday evening about seven o'clock occurred the death of Miss Mary Page Pike. The deceased has always been delicate and for the past few months has been gradually failing although she was up and around and was not any sicker than common up to a short time before she died. She has made her home with Mrs. Haskell for a number of years. Monday morning she was around as usual and came down stairs and had breakfast and then went upstairs. About noon Mrs. Haskell went upstairs and found her lying on the bed apparently dropping down from exhaustion. From that time on she gradually grew weaker and finally passed away quietly. Mary Pike was a devout christian woman, always happy and uncomplaining and if there is any heavenly home, and as christian people we believe there is, then she has indeed found rest there. She is the sister of Mrs. J. L. Houghton and Mrs. A. Haskell of this city and has several brothers living in various parts of Minnesota, her mother and father being dead. A good woman has gone to her reward. A short service was held at the Haskell home Wednesday afternoon, Rev. H. C. Kispagh officiating, and the remains were taken to Medford, Minn., on the afternoon train, where the funeral will be held and interment made by the side of her father and other members of the family. Mrs. Haskell and J. A. Moffatt accompanied the remains.
