

DOUBLE WEDDING.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Rorvig was the scene of a very impressive wedding service Monday afternoon, when their daughters Olga Magdalena and Selma Agunda were united in wedlock to Morris Greenland and Peter Lawrence Lewis, respectively. Rev. Eliason performed the marriage ceremony in the Norwegian language, and it was beautiful in its every detail. The brides were attired in beautiful gowns of white taffeta silk, wearing the veil, and a bouquet of roses in the hair. The grooms were neatly dressed in black. The attendants were Miss Olvai Greenland and Mary Rorvig as bridesmaids and Chris Greenland and Arthur Lewis as best men. All of the party wore bouquets of cream roses.

The ceremony took place at 3 o'clock at which time a large number of invited guests were present among whom was the Binford Cornet Band of which Mr. Greenland was at one time a member. At a little before the appointed hour for the ceremony the band struck up a lively piece entitled "Lieutenant Santelman's March" during the rendition of which the bridal parties entered and took their places before the altar.

After the marriage, while the many friends of the newly married young people were offering congratulations the band rendered a nice program of music which consisted in part of the following:

Serenade	Cupid's Charms
March	Queen of the Sea
Galop	Over the Rockies
Spanish Waltz	San Salvador
March (Sacred)	Missionaire
March	5th Regiment Band

At the conclusion of the musical program the band boys filed in to express their good wishes for the future of the happy young people. Everyone was then free to enjoy the occasion and the time was spent in a nice social way the guests assembling in little groups to have a pleasant visit. The time soon went by and in due season the party was invited to a bountiful feast of the best the land affords, which was prepared in a way that has particularly distinguished the worthy hostess. It seems that the women are becoming more and more efficient in the art of cooking for it seems that each meal gets just a trifle better than the one just before it. The only way we have of judging is by noting the manner in which E. M. Jackson, F. G. Lewis, George Lockett, O. S. Gunderson, Dr. Truscott and a few other dyspeptics get away with the good things as they are shoved toward them. In order to keep Lockett from killing himself it was necessary to call time on him.

The wedding taken as a whole was a very enjoyable occasion and all who attended had a very nice time. The day was concluded by a dance which lasted far into the night and furnished the dancers a good time.
