

The Valley City and Bismarck papers are loudly howling over the inability of the citizens to get the bands of their towns to give them open air concerts. Oh, you poor people, who have your street cars, city water works, fire departments, beautiful parks and cement side walks, how would like to live in Binford where the band comes out to play before the people have even thought of it. Two open air concerts every week by one of the best bands for the size of the town that you can find in the state. We don't miss the luxuries of city life for we have the music and the people of our cities are thirsting for a God-given pleasure and the most beautiful of arts—music. We can now understand why the pretty Fargo girl said that some of the Binford band boys looked good to her.
