An exchange says: Small men with small purposes do not help to make a town lively and progressive. The man who never contributes to public enterprise or voluntarily assists in supporting any of the public enterprises is not worth coaxing to remain in a town, and should he decide to move out it is always a matter of congratulation. It's units and not mere ciphers that count for something. "Be a unit."

Mail carriers have no authority to trespass upon private property and the postal laws give them no special rights or privileges as regard the use of public roads. The law prohibits any wilful interference with the performance of postal service, but such prohibition does not authorize mail carriers to disregard state laws or municipal ordinances as regards the use of the public roads, nor authorizes them to wilfully interfere with the rightful use of public roads, by both parties.

Ludvig Amundson and T. K. Curry made a trip to Tolna and Pekin, last Saturday. It was our first visit to our neighbors on the north, and we can say that the towns are very nicely located and are building up quite substantially, altho there is not much business there just yet, perhaps because there is no market for grain. There are no elevators yet, and the railroad has been delayed in getting to the towns. However, the railroad had reached Tolna by Saturday and is no doubt going on rapidly now. At Pekin we found everything progressing nicely and looking prosperous.
