

George Bowe has discovered that his right eye can not stand the light as well as the left one can, so he butted up against a 2x4 and came away with the weak eye shaded. He also tore a piece of skin from the end of his nasal projection which lightens that part of the burden by about a pound.

I have some more lead from five