

EIGHT CORRALED

Tuesday afternoon Constable Dell Burner, of Hope appeared in town and soon had under arrest, charged with violating the prohibition law, Frank M. Chilcote, W. M. Case and John Flora. He also had a warrant for Fred Shinn who had gone to Aneta on the morning train. Fred was secured at Aneta and brought down on the evening train by Chief of Police Torfin. They were all taken to Sherbrooke that evening.

The same day, A. E. Near, the G. N. agent at Sharon, Clem Riordan, Loyal Harmon and J. Kingsley, all of Sharon, were arrested on the charge of violating the prohibition law and taken to Sherbrooke.

Hearings were had before Justice Boise with the following results:

A. E. Near waived examination, was placed under $1,000 bonds, which were furnished, with George Long and James Curry as sureties.

L. O. Harmon, bound over under $1,000 bonds, which have not been furnished.

Clem Riordan, waived examination, and placed under $1,000 bonds; not furnished yet.

J. Kingsley, waived examination, and placed under $1,000 bonds; not furnished yet.

John Flora, placed under $1,000 bonds; took change of venue to Justice R. J. Still.

Frank Chilcote, placed under $1,000; took change of venue to Justice R. J. Still.

Wm. M. Case, placed under $1,000 bonds; took change of venue to Justice R. J. Still.

Fred Shinn placed under $1,000 bonds.

Up to the time of going to press A. E. Near was the only one who had furnished bonds. Those not furnishing bonds will have a long time to wait in the Hillsboro jail until the next term of court which sets in June.

Some comment is being made as to the size of the bonds required in these cases, but in view of the fact that several in the past have put up small cash bonds and forfeited them, has made it necessary to place the bonds high enough to insure the presence of the accused at trial. Many people are characterizing the prohibition law a farce because so many do forfeit light bonds and get away.

This clean-up should act as a warning to those inclined to indulge in the selling of liquor contrary to law, that Steele county proposes to enforce the law.—
