

A. H. Overby went to Valley City last Thursday to visit the hospital for treatment for his injured hand. A part of the stub, which was spared after the first operation has become dead flesh, and it was believed at the time of his departure that the entire palm would need to be amputated, which would leave practically nothing to the hand except the thumb.