

Torger Rogne, while in Minneapolis a few weeks ago, secured a position in a sash and door factory, and came back to Binford to see his friends once more before entering upon his duties. He was allowed ample time to begin work, and on Monday last he departed for the city to take up his work. Torger is a boy who has had rather a hard time of it at times for he was easily tempted as well as provoked, but he was urged by his friends to spruce up, and he has done so to the extent that he now has a different view of life and hopes to make a great change in his career. He left Binford Monday with the best of hopes and anticipations and, that he may fully realize every good point that he hopes for is the earnest wish of his friends in Binford.
