R. B. Vogen met with a painful accident last Sunday. While driving out of town he was compelled to cross a low place which proved a trifle boggy and there was danger of getting his horses mired, so he whipped the horses and they plunged forth with a jerk, breaking the whiffle tree. Mr. Vogen hung to the lines and was dragged out of the buggy, his right shoulder being dislocated as a result. Dr. Truscott replaced the shoulder, and, altho it is in place yet it is the source of considerable annoyance to Mr. Vogen because of the soreness.
