

Rearick on the Judge

It is reported that Judge Will H. Carleton and Mrs. Daisy Shue were recently married, but we have been unable to learn any particulars whatever, either as to date or place. It will be remembered that the judge mysteriously disappeared from here some time ago. He left without mentioning cigars or hiring the band, therefore we incline to the belief that if the report is true and the deed is done, it was pre-meditated. And it seems that between the bowling alley and a fireside of his own he chose to surrender, but deliberately planned to take an awful revenge for this sacrifice by frustrating the home newspapers and deceiving them. But marriage will out, no matter how dark and deep laid the plans may be. We wonder if the judge will have the temerity to enter the political race and expect a re-election after this impolitic treatment of the printer-man.—Sentinel.
