Coo-Friday and had it all figured out how they were going to trim up "the boys on the sand hills" and con-sequently be in line for the equently be championship. But base ball is too uncertain for that. They hardly know what to lay it too. Manager Graff says the boys were drowsy on account of the long auto jaunt, and that's as good as any—from their point of view. their point of view.

It was an ideal day for base ball—one of those pitchy, itchy, ice cream cone days. Butternut Sievert was the deceit for the locals. He was peaches and cream wit deceit flinger all the with a little sugar smeared on.
