

Lewis Berg of Cooperstown met with a very painful accident Saturday, and one that will probably disfigure him for life. He was turning the crank on a gasoline engine to start the machine, when the wheel on which the crank was fastened kicked back with great force and hit him in the face, breaking his nose and otherwise cutting him up badly. Medical aid was summoned and he getting along nicely.