

BAND MAY BE STARTED AGAIN

From the Present Outlook It
Would Seem that Nothing
Stands in the Way.

The Times has heard considerable comment the past few days in regards to resurrecting the band, and from present indications the proposition looks feasible.

Binford had a good band at one time but on account of other pressing matters and the removal from town of some of its members, the band abandoned their rehearsals—which was the beginning of the end. A few of the old members have returned, however, and the matter is again uppermost in the minds of many. In fact, with most of the older heads here and the injection of a little new blood Binford could have a far better band in a short time than they ever had. Many of those who did not belong to the band before have signified a willingness to become members.

In connection with the proposed venture the Times man interviewed Director Brodshaug and he informed us that he would be willing to take hold again. He also stated that he couldn't very well go ahead without some remuneration, and in that respect the Times will uphold him.

Binford is indeed very fortunate in having so good a band man as Mr. Brodshaug residing here. Many towns thruout the state, in order to have a band, have been compelled to hire an outside man as director, and good band men, as a rule, command a pretty good salary. It can hardly be expected that Mr. Brodshaug donate his services.

Let's get together, anyway, and see if we cannot devise ways and means for its re-organization.
