

Workmen are here for the purpose of digging a well for the new water tank for the railroad company. A car of brick has been unloaded and will be used as a curbing for the well. There is no limit to the water supply in Binford and vicinity and the railroad people have been wise in deciding to have a tank here. Work on the new depot is expected to begin at once, so it will be seen that Binford is in the front with many valuable improvements. Wait until that new depot is completed and the old shack yanked out of the middle of the street where it now stands, and that street gets fixed up clear through, and we think we will have a few nice things to show you in way of substantial improvement. Binford is here you know and here to STAY.
