

The new railroad siding at this point is completed and the main street crossing is in and things look like SOMETHING NOW. A glance at the Binford railroad yards as they appear now would lead one to believe he was in one of the largest railroad centers in the world. The windmill is up, the pump is in position and the tank is now building. and that much-talked-of new depot is a dead sure thing and is a dandy. Binford is on the move and don't you forget it, nobody dead here.

As the editor of this paper