

Messrs. Ben E. Nelson, Allison Bowe and Oscar Kittelson had an exciting time while on their way to the lake last Sunday. The horses they had hired became unruly about four miles out of town and after unsuccessful attempts of each occupant to do the driving stunt the beasts were steered into a wheat field—behold! the conquering heroes. The boys got out of the rig and were going to unhitch but no sooner had they got out when the horses took fright and were off—leaving the boys behind. The team ran into a telephone pole—one on each side—stripping them of their harness. The trio of pleasure seekers were obliged to hoof it to town and swear by the auto route hereafter.