

Barber Petetson is threatened with blood poison in his right arm and has closed up his shop for the time being. He was bit on the forearm by a baseball during practice about two weeks ago, but thought no more of the matter, practicing with the boys many times since, until a few days ago when the arm commenced to swell, causing him considerable pain. It is hoped that his condition doesn't become more alarming and that he will soon be back attending to his work.

Hampden Enterprise: The