AND THE CAT CAME BACK.

With this issue the editorial management of the TIMES passes into new hands. The editor is by no means a stranger in Binford, having labored here some three years ago. One has but to absent himself from a place for only a short period to notice the changes that have taken place. This is the case with the writer. Three years have elapsed since we were located at Binford and that comparatively short time has wrought many notable changes. Mostly all the familiar faces still remain and all seem to have mingled with prosperity. Several new people have taken up their residence here and they too, are enjoying success to the fullest measure. The most notable changes, however, have been the building operations. From a mere hamlet of a few small frame buildings it has grown to a busy little village of handsome brick and cement business blocks.

The editor is glad to get back and once more resume his work with the good citizens of Binford. He has no promises to make other than we will always be willing and anxious to put in our "best licks" for the advancement of any project that may arise for the interest of the community, and, on the other hand, ask your hearty co-operation.

It is our ambition to make the TIMES the best paper in the best town on the line and if the readers will bear with us for a short time and lend us a little assistance in the way of local news we think we can reach our point. The TIMES will have its new press in a short time, and that, with several other improvements in the way of new type and up-to-date material, will have one of the best equipped job departments for many miles around.

In closing will say we will always be found ready to roll up our sleeves and get busy.

Your obedient servant,

Carl E. Peterson.
