

The Times is in receipt of a letter from Oscar Torgerson who went from here some time ago to Aberdeen, Washington, and he is enjoying himself to the limit if we judge correctly from his letter. He is fifteen miles from the sea shore, and he says the waves seem to call, call all the time. He may answer the call some day and go to sea, become a sailor and wear a big blue uniform, and kill sharks, etc.