

field Monday. Death was due to heart failure. The man was out plowing with a sulky plow and it seems he was just turning a corner when stricken. He had been home for afternoon lunch about 4 o'clock and it is believed that he died a short time after. Ole Danielson, who owns the farm adjoining, was also plowing and noticed that Mr. Jasme's team remained still for some, so at dusk he went over to the Jesme home, and together with Mrs. Jesme, they went to the field. The dead man was found immediately behind the plow. Deceased is survived by a wife and children. He was 25 years old.
