

and it is remarkable the way they are advancing. They are showing an earnestness in their desire to give Binford the best band of its history and with several new members added we believe this can be accomplished before the summer season is over. Their first public appearance will be made on Market day and you can rest assured that the boys will do their share in entertaining the crowd and carrying out their end of the program. The Times believes the band should be provided with uniforms and that something should be done to secure them as soon as possible. There are many schemes by which money can be raised for that purpose, but we have a hunch that enough money can be appropriated by the village board to provide the band with uniforms. The band is the town's institution, so why should that be out of the question, any more than making an appropriation for its maintenance and we know of places where this is done. The old uniforms are worn out and faded and become too small, so that making an appearance in them would be ridiculous. Show an interest in the band. If you can't blow a horn you can do a lot by helping the fellow that can.
