

The Times has moved into its new home, opposite the opera house. We don't like to boast, but not many papers in towns the size of Binford can boast of as good a home as we have. And, sad to relate, the advertising columns of the Times are not sufficiently patronized to warrant any improvements. No, gentlemen, it isn't prosperity—we call it a lot of unadulterated nerve.

---