Buchheit-Bakken Co. have been making extensive changes on the interior of their store this week. They have felt the pressing need of more shelf room for some of their departments, and have moved the office into the clothing room. This will give them the back end of the main building for a portion of their grocery stock and more room for their large line of shoes on the old grocery shelves. They expect to put on sale soon their entire line of clothing in order to reduce the stock and will make some slashing prices in order to move the goods. This will come at an opportune time for the people to lay in their supply for winter. Watch for the announcement in The Times.
