

was considered very satisfactory.

After the conclusion of the farmers' institute Tuesday afternoon, the meeting of the Binford Farmers' club was held and the following officers were elected: President, F. J. Lewis; first vice president, D. A. Goplin; second vice president, C. F. Asmus; secretary and treasurer, O. G. Arneson; executive committee, M. D. Leininger, Henry Asmus and E. E. Iverson; entertainment committee, A. M. Hemerlin, M. D. Leininger and W. E. Colvin. The club has been a dead one during the past year, but the members propose taking on new life, and from now on regular monthly meetings will be held. The next meeting will be held next Wednesday, and every member and all others are urged to attend. The program committee is preparing an excellent program which will be of interest to all, and if you have the development of this country at heart you should not miss these meetings, and not only that, but you should become a member of the club and assist with the work. Come out to the meeting next Wednesday at the opera house.
