

The postoffice department at Washington gives notice to postmasters to have the weeds cut along the roadsides of rural routes and patrons on the routes should do their share of weed cutting. Next winter they will find that they have not only helped the carrier but themselves as well, when the snow gets to drifting up in heaps.