

The postoffice department at Washington has sent out notices to postmasters of the larger post-offices in the cities that there will be a new style postcard printed as soon as the supply now on hand of old style runs out. The new cards will be slightly thicker and heavier than the ones now in use and may be just a trifle larger. The greatest change will be in the color of the card and the ink to used. All the printing will be in bright red and the cards will be tinted in attractive pink color.
