

In speaking with the rural carriers this week in regards to the roads on their routes, they stated that a lot of good road work has been done this year, but that a great many of the farmers have neglected to cut the weeds along the roads. This negligence on the part of the farmers will cause the carriers and their horses a good deal of hardship next winter unless it is remedied before that time. We all know that the carriers' job is no snap in the winter months, and a little time taken now to mow the weeds will relieve them of much worry and hardships. A few hours work will insure you of your mail when the snow flies and besides you will earn the everlasting blessing of the carriers.
