

The Binford public schools are moving along in a smooth and even manner these days, and the faculty has the work well in hand after the first month's work. All the classes are arranged in such shape as to get the best possible results, and a visitor there is impressed with the manner in which the teachers are handling their respective rooms. The schools are a busy place these days, and there is most harmony between the faculty and the pupils.

A. J. Gibbons      L. E. Johnson