The Times does not care to criticise the village board, because we feel they know as much and more than we do about the affairs of the village, but it does seem that something could be done to drain the water off the streets. It is something ~~unpleasant~~ unpleasant. Each spring the same condition exists and in some parts of town the water is so deep that people don't care to drive thru it, besides it makes it inconvenient to pedestrians. The worst spot in town, we believe, is the street between the First State bank and Larson, Ringlee & Co.'s store. Here it is so bad that farmers cannot hitch their teams to the posts and get to the walk without wading in water over their shoe tops. We believe all will agree with us that something should be done, and where there's a will there's a way.
