

able one.

Morris Greenland and family have moved into town, after spending the summer on the Ole Rorvig farm, where Mr. Greenland has been communing with nature. On account of a threatening danger from paralysis Mr. Greenland was compelled to give up his position with the L. R. Welles lumber company and seek rest. He has been taking treatment for the illness, and while not entirely cured is feeling a whole lot better than when he went out. His many friends sincerely hope that his recovery may be rapid and complete.