

Would Have County Expert.

That the county agricultural expert system is one that should be employed in North Dakota is the belief of President J. H. Worst of the North Dakota agricultural college, and in an interview given out in Fargo he declares that such a method would be fruitful of better farming methods.

This agricultural advisor or expert would make a complete study of the local conditions and he would be in position to give the farmers advice as to the best methods of farming.

Arrested for Bootlegging.

Monday afternoon Jim Hall was arrested on a bootlegging charge. It seems that he has been suspected of conducting such a business for some time and has been occupying a small building in the outskirts of the village. Monday afternoon he was seen taking something to the building which appeared to be a case of "booze" and the suspicions of the marshal were aroused and a search of the building was made. It was found to contain a number of small vials of some kind of chemicals with directions on them for making whiskey, also a number of empty whiskey bottles. From this it was believed that Hall was both manufacturing and selling liquor and he was placed under arrest. His trial was held Tuesday morning and he was bound over to the district court. Not being able to give bond Sheriff Stenchel came up Tuesday evening and took him to Valley City to await the hearing in the district court.
