

last Thursday, April 9.

W. F. Goodwall, the butcher, has made a deal to open the meat market at Jessie on Saturday, and will operate it in connection with his shop here. He will have a competent block man in charge of the Jessie shop, and will send all the supplies down from here. The Times is pleased to give Mr. Goodwall a boost. During his month's residence here he has certainly conducted his business in such a manner as to merit the confidence and good will of his patrons and the whole public. He aims to keep a sanitary place and scarcely a day passes but what he has on hand a large stock of the choicest meats, sausages, etc. The people of Jessie are fortunate in having Mr. Goodwall open up their shop and we predict success for him.
