

Lewis Johnson's injury from an attack by a bull at his farm near Sverdrup this week, was only three broken ribs. The presence of the hired man at the time the animal attacked him probably saved him from death, for he was unable to help himself. One of the broken ribs punctured his lung and he is still in a precarious condition.