
Manager Brown Now Rides.

General Manager Brown, of the Sheyenne Telephone company, ceases to walk the route of the company's lines any more—at least as long as the weather does not interfere—the roads are good—his auto cycle works—and he remains in physical condition. Allowing all these chances, he now rides a new Excelsior auto cycle, which arrived Friday for the express purpose of improving their service, and will assist greatly in getting to and from the rural lines. Manager Brown has already conceived an idea to place an attachment to the new machine so as to facilitate climbing poles more easily than using his spiked boots. Leave it to Brown for clever stunts.—Mc-Ville Journal.
