

Robt. Mueller, one of the prosperous farmers of the north country, was a visitor in Binford yesterday, and paid this office a substantial visit. Mr. Mueller was a frequent business visitor in Binford before the north line was built. He grew a little reminiscent in his talk, and said that while it was quite a haul to Binford, he remembered when he had to haul to Cooperstown and with low prices at that time, he had to put on a good sized load in order to get enough money to stay over night which they had to do.
