

B. A. Hermandson and A. H. Overby were over to the Jim river last week to do some fishing and on their return to town, Mr. Hermandson told us a story, which sounds fishy to one who does not know him, but he swears that it is true. The fish, all suckers, were so thick in the rapids that the boys threw them out with their hands and gathered about 1000 of them that way. A peculiar thing about it is, that this happened during the snow fall, and as soon as it stopped snowing the fish stopped coming over the rapids. Mr. Hermandson brought some of the fish to town with him, and while he admits the story sounds fishy, it is true nevertheless.
