

The children were not hurt.

The Sutton Reporter was issued for the first time last week, and the youngster has every indication of becoming one of the leading papers of this section of the state. The paper is a six-column folio, all home print, and carried a nice line of advertising, in addition to a live bunch of news and booster articles. The editor is a stranger to North Dakota, but his first issue is sufficient proof that he will fit in with the progressive people of the state. We welcome Brother Marris to Griggs county and wish him success.
