

Samples of Sutton water were sent to Fargo last week to be analyzed, it having been suspected of being impure and otherwise unfit for use. Returns from Fargo show the fears of Sutton people to have been well founded as the samples were found to contain bacilli in large quantity. As a result Sutton wells have been condemned and the problem of obtaining suitable drinking water confronts the residents of that thriving little village anew.