

Hurt at the Fair.

Sentinel: A horse belonging to Clarence Simonson, of Washburn, was frightened at the Fair Grounds Thursday evening, and after breaking away from the buggy which was over-turned and its occupants spilled out—without injury—, ran away, hurting two persons severely and causing great excitement.

Ludvig Stokkeland was severely injured, having three ribs and his collarbone broken. It was rumored on the streets that evening that he died, but this was erroneous. He was fixed up by the doctors and taken to his home on the Torkel Fosholdt farm north of town, and is said to be doing nicely, although he will be laid up several weeks.

Mrs. Theodore Thompson and her baby were caught between the excited horse and their auto. Mrs. Thompson, in an effort to save her baby, narrowly escaped serious injury. The baby escaped unharmed, but Mrs. Thompson was badly bruised and the shock rendered her helpless for some time. She has quite recovered.

All are glad that no greater injuries were caused, for in the crowd it is almost a miracle that no one was killed.
