

Courier: Trygve Vigesaa, son of Torkel Vigesaa, pulled off a somnambulistic stunt last Sunday night. He got up in his sleep between eleven and twelve o'clock and walked a mile and a half clad only in his underclothes and socks. He crossed the coulee and up the ravine over the hill and did not realize what he was doing until he was near the neighbor's house. He went in there and Dr. Westley was immediately called down to administer to his needs. Fortunately the young man was not very badly damaged by his experience. His toes were quite badly frozen but it is not thought that he will lose any of them. Once before this young man pulled off a walking stunt in his sleep but in warmer weather
