

POSTAL CHANGES ARE EXPLAINED

First Class Mail Goes on the Rural Routes at the Same Old Rate.

The changes in postage, while understood by some, are not generally known in full, and a new light was shed on local postage by Postmaster Knapp who had been reading the latest instructions. A letter mailed either at the post office or on a route addressed to some other postoffice requires three cents in postage, but a letter mailed either at the office or on the routes addressed to Binford takes two cents. That is, if you mail a letter from one of the routes addressed for example to The Times it will go for two cents, or if anyone in the city mails one to a person on a route or in the city it requires two cents postage. Likewise a person on route 1 can mail for two cents a letter to a person on route 2 or 3.

There has been no change in fourth class postage and the circular that formerly went for one cent still continues on its way at the same old price.
