

Same Thing in Binford.

Sentinel-Courier: If we are not badly mistaken there is an ordinance which prohibits spitting on the sidewalks of the city, but that no effort is made to enforce it is revealed by a glance at most any of the filthy, tobacco-laden walks in the main portion of the city, and especially those fronting our more important business establishments. We know of nothing more disgusting or so far removed from the first principles of cleanliness, than a walk literally covered with tobacco juice. Pigs is pigs, and if the two legged variety insist on acting the part they should occupy a prominent position with their four-legged brothers in the nearest pen. Local officials are devoting considerable attention to the enforcement of the speed laws within the city limits—which is commendable, but in their zeal in this direction, other evils, equally bad, should not be overlooked.
