

W. D. Ehlers and wife returned yesterday from Iowa, where they have been visiting with relatives since before the holidays. No sooner had they alighted from the train, when Bill was heard to remark: "Thank God, we're back in good, old North Dakota again, and I'm not going to leave again for the next ten years." They had a pleasant reunion with relatives, but, aside from that, all they saw was shows and funerals. The weather in Iowa was milder than it had been here, but with a damper atmosphere they experienced more discomfort than they would here with the thermometer registering many degrees lower.
