

here. On the jump is right.

Hannaford Enterprise: That the Griggs County Creamery has some severe competition to go up against we have long realized. Attention has been called in these columns before to the fact that centralizers are offering several cents more for cream to farmers in this vicinity than the prices quoted to producers where there is no local creamery. Now they are adopting other tactics. Last Wednesday a man was busily at work at the local depot copying down names and addresses from empty cream cans being shipped back to the farmers. It is no doubt but that the people whose names and addresses were thus obtained will receive glowing inducements to ship their cream elsewhere. We hope all our creamery patrons will stand loyally by their home industry in spite of every underhand effort by outsiders to harm it.