JESSIE NEWS.

Jas. McCulloch is spending a few days in Cooperstown on business.

Prof. Walter Sigge left on Wednesday for Binford to assist with the Odd Fellow's ball.

All things come to those who wait long enough. For proof of this see the train on Saturday last.

Services were conducted in the Catholic church by Rev. O'Breren of Sanborn. There were about 25 people present.

The burning topic has been, "Have you seen the train yet?" But now it has changed to "WHO LOCKED THAT DOOR?"

Harry St. John was a Cooperstown guest Monday evening and while there he attended the Masonic session, returning Tuesday.

Col. and Mrs. Mark of Jamestown arrived Monday and will remain for a few days. Col. uses a cane but is rapidly regaining his usual good health. He still has his well developed appetite.

The train crew and shovelers undoubtedly never had so welcome a reception as on Saturday last when the Russell plow began to push thru the cuts to the east of Jessie. Practically the entire male population was there.

Louis LaPlante drove to Cooperstown Tuesday evening last week, returning Wednesday evening with a large quantity of mail. O. M. Rogney, Jean Haugen and H. St. John brought some Monday evening, and in this way we kept alive our interest in the outside world.

Tuesday afternoon N. McCulloch drove to Cooperstown and brought back the Jessie mail on Saturday, as when he left it wasn't known that the train would come any farther. He was accompanied by Art Olsen and W. H. Stevens. Mr. Stevens was a visitor at the Fred Tollefson home until Monday when he returned to Wimbledon.

Our school will soon sport a new flagpole as the old one was no longer suitable. The state's attorney says the law regarding the school flag being displayed must be observed. Now if some of the patriotic citizens of our district will make the school a present of a new "Old Glory" we will feel that we are in line with other school centers.

Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Dahl, who have been guests of the N. McCulloch family for some months, left on Monday for a brief visit with their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Nyre at Carpio. After a few weeks they will go out to Montana and visit with C. P. Dahl. We trust they will have better weather than has been their lot in Jessie for the past few weeks.

Mrs. Graham McCulloch says that while they may raise their boys to be soldiers, they don't propose to raise their turkeys to be food for the festive coyote. She says enough is just too much, and Graham having lost two traps said the same. So getting out his trusty "Krag" he began a hunt and before he returned to a belated dinner he had covered over 20 miles. At the end of the tracking he, in company with Paul Vang, finally laid him low. The pelt will be cared for by Paul. Graham says tracking coyotes is "just a snap." He likes turkey himself.

Arthur Aasland, who is making his home with N. McCulloch, wanted a shave Friday evening and as walking was not his strong suit, he took Bay Star, rode into Jessie full of vinegar and good cheer. Arriving here he stopped in front of Mark's emporium and slipped the bridle over the end of a long railing, while waiting for the other fellow, who apparently had a mortgage on the chair, he was informed that the horse was not there. Just how, when or why, is not for publication, but Bay Star had an idea that the stable would be better for his young years. Arriving at his home amid the welcome of the dogs he was cared for by Mr. Dahl. But the blanket was missing. Arthur arrived at a later hour, same being unknown at this time. In the morning he found the blanket and is himself once more. He says he will use a different method of tying his mount next time, and says the walk was all right but lonely.

Perhaps my statement in a recent issue of The Times may have been misinterpreted. At the meeting of the board they decided to allow me to withdraw my resignation and continue my school.—Arthur K. Olsen.
