Boyd Knapp informed The Times man Monday, that he had seen an antelope in the hills northwest of town on Sunday. In company with his wife and hired man they were out for an auto ride, when they saw the animal resting a short distance from the road. On being discovered the antelope ran swiftly over the hills, and though the party tried they were unable to get another glimpse of him. Some were inclined to doubt the veracity of Boyd's statement, but he swears it is true and that the other parties in the car will vouch for its truthfulness.
