

C. A. Linse and family have returned to Binford from near Sutton, where Clarence has been operating a threshing rig this fall. Questioned as to where they will live until they can move into the house now occupied by C. F. Heinsen, Clarence replied that he was going to sponge on his friends and that he would pay the editor a visit. Well, if he can subsist on our diet, viz: Type lice, ink and old rollers, he's welcome—that is, unless some of our country subscribers bring in vegetables to apply on subscription accounts.
