

John Norman is enjoying a vacation from his duties at Buchheit-Bakken Co.'s store, and in company with his son, LeLander, left last Thursday for a fortnight's visit with friends in Minneapolis. George Olstad is employed at the store during Mr. Norman's absence.

Owing to the high cost of leather